Legislative Districts

After the 2000 Census, the population in each of Arizona's 30 legislative districts averaged 170,000. At the time the total population was 5.13 million. Ten years later the state's population has grown 25% to 6.4 million and after redistricting the average population per legislative district will be 213,000. Flagstaff's 2010 population of 66,000 is roughly one percent of the state population. Adding Coconino County more than doubles that, but still barely encompasses over two percent of state residents. As there are only 30 districts, statewide representation of this region is bound to change

Flagstaff currently lies in the heart of State Legislative District 1. It is, however, not part of that district. The city shares State District 2 with the Navajo Nation and Grand Canyon National Park. On all sides save a narrow corridor east, Flagstaff is surrounded by District 1. Figure 2 illustrates the district boundaries in the Flagstaff area.

The following pages present data concerning the five legislative districts that encompass northern Arizona. These areas are the most relevant to the interests of the Flagstaff/Coconino County area and will thus be more prominently displayed. Data for all 30 districts is compiled in the appendix.

As redistricting guidelines require the recognition of "communities of interest," and competitiveness (when practicable), the measures provided (population, race, ethnicity, political party affiliation) will play a strong role in the process. Some of these districts contain populations very close to the new average of 213,000, although there is no guarantee that they won't be altered. Those with high populations will definitely be divided, and those with smaller populations will, at the least, expand to include surrounding areas.

Flagstaff Area Legislative Districts

District 1

District 1 contains portions of Coconino and Yavapai Counties, including most of the non-incorporated communities surrounding Flagstaff. Its 2010 population of 217,000 is very close to what will be the new district population. The proportion of whites in the district has shrunk while the proportion of Hispanics has grown.

District 2

District 2 represents voting districts in Apache, Coconino, Mohave, Navajo, and Yavapai Counties. The population has only grown by around 10,000 since 2000. Proportionally, Hispanics and whites have increased a small amount. Native Americans still hold a strong majority in District 2, which is one of seven “minority-majority” districts under current boundaries. Flagstaff is located in this district, along with most of the Navajo Nation and Grand Canyon National Park.

District 3

District 3 represents portions of Coconino, La Paz, and Mohave Counties. The 2010 population of 217,000 is very close to the new population average of 213,000, although this is no guarantee that the boundaries won't change. Hispanics have increased as a proportion of the population. The white fraction has decreased slightly.

District 4

District 4 has grown significantly since the 2000 census. Its population is nearly 300,000, suggesting that representation in this area will be altered considerably when new lines are drawn. This district is located in portions of Yavapai and Maricopa Counties. In recent years the proportion of white residents has shrunk, while proportions of all other races have grown. The percent of Hispanic residents has grown significantly.

District 5

District 5 contains portions of Apache, Coconino, Gila, Graham, Greenlee, and Navajo Counties. Its current population of 192,000 is less than the new average of 213,000, thus changes will lead to expansion of this district beyond its current boundaries. Population distribution by race has not changed much since 2000, but the proportion of the area that is Hispanic has grown somewhat.

Appendix

The Arizona Independent Redistricting Commission, 2011

The job of redrawing Arizona's political districts falls to the following five people. Two of them are Republicans, two are Democrats, and the Chairman is an Independent. One is a CPA, two are lawyers, one works in health care, and another works for a faith-based advocacy group. Only one commissioner, José Herrera, seems to have ties to northern Arizona. All five live in either Phoenix or Tucson. The data listed was provided by each candidate's application for the Commission.

Colleen Mathis, Chair, an Independent, is a government funding manager for University Physicians Healthcare. She lives in Tucson and has only been an Arizona resident since 2001. Her office phone number is (520) 874-2489.

Scott D. Freeman, Vice Chair, a Republican, is an attorney at Fennemore Craig, P.C. He has a BS from the University of Arizona and a JD from Arizona State University. He lives in Phoenix. His office phone number is (602)916-5338

José Herrera, Vice Chair, a Democrat, is senior manager of member services at the Arizona Society of CPAs, and a resident of Phoenix. Mr. Herrera has the only Northern Arizona ties among the commissioners. He holds both a BA in International Affairs and an MA in Educational Leadership from Northern Arizona University. He was on the NAU Alumni Association board from 2003-2009. His office phone number is (602) 252-4144.

Linda McNulty, Commissioner, a Democrat, is a partner at the law firm Lewis and Roca LLP. She holds a JD from UA and lives in Tucson. Her office Phone number is (520) 838-7720.

Richard Stertz, Commissioner, a Republican, also lives in Tucson. He is CEO of Vision 360/4, a faith-based organization of some kind. His in-state education was at the University of Arizona, but he does not appear to hold a degree. His office phone number is (520) 745-4404.

The web site for the Commission is located at <http://www.azredistricting.org>, and lists meetings of the commission as well as agendas, minutes, and transcripts of past meetings.

This is only the second Commission since they were mandated by state voters.
