

Alcohol and Drug Abuse Education and Prevention/Intervention Programs

Several university departments are involved in the delivery of alcohol and drug abuse information programs and prevention services for the entire university community on an on-going basis. For example:

Throughout the year, the NAU Police Department provides classes to community members on alcohol and DUI awareness as well as classes on drug awareness focusing on the various types of drugs, both legal and illegal, that are abused by society today. Specific information is provided on the look of the drug, behavior and physical characteristics of the person using the drug, addiction levels and long-term effects on the body.

Employee Assistance and Wellness (EAW) offers counseling and referral services to faculty and staff for personal and professional issues including substance abuse. Consultation services are provided for supervisors and customized training programs for departments and groups. A comprehensive list of services and contact information can be accessed at www4.nau.edu/eaw/.

The Health Promotion Office provides educational presentations, activities and awareness campaigns to help reduce the risks associated with student behaviors involving alcohol and drugs. Their office also provides free educational materials such as brochures for students and staff. Presentations can be requested through their website at nau.edu/health-services/health-promotions/.

Alcohol and drug abuse prevention programs offered by the NAU Police Department can be scheduled by contacting the NAU Police Department at (928) 523-3611 or by emailing the department directly at askNAUPD@nau.edu.

The university encourages any students or employees who may have problems with the use of alcohol or drugs to seek professional advice and treatment. The following prevention/intervention programs are available on campus and in the greater Flagstaff area:
